

Restraining Orders In Wisconsin

This document, created by the End Domestic Abuse Wisconsin — Wisconsin Coalition Against Domestic Violence — Legal Department, does not constitute legal advice.

§813.128\(2g\)\(a\) states that a foreign protection order shall be accorded full faith and credit by the tribunals in this state and shall be enforced as if the order were an order of a tribunal of this state. A foreign protection order is a protection order issued by a tribunal [a court, agency, or other entity of a state of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the United States Virgin Islands, an American Indian tribe or band, or any territory or insular possession subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, authorized by law to issue or modify a protection order] other than a tribunal of this state. See §813.128\(1g\)\(c\), §813.128\(1g\)\(g\). A protection order is any temporary or permanent injunction or order issued by a tribunal to prevent an individual from engaging in abuse, bodily harm, communication, contact, harassment, physical proximity, threatening acts, or violence to another person, other than for support or custody orders. This term includes an injunction or order issued under the anti-stalking laws of the issuing state. §813.128\(1g\)\(e\). A foreign protection order or modification of the foreign protection order that meets the requirements under this section has the same effect as an order issued under §§813.12, 813.122, 813.123 or 813.125, except that the foreign protection order or modification shall be enforced according to its own terms. §813.128\(2g\)\(b\). See <http://www.bwjp.org/our-work/projects/protection-orders.html> for more information.

	DOMESTIC ABUSE SECTION 813.12	CHILD ABUSE SECTION 813.122	INDIVIDUALS AT RISK (IAR) SECTION 813.123	HARASSMENT SECTION 813.125
1. What is the process to obtain a restraining order? This information is the same for all types of restraining orders. Filing a restraining order is usually a two-step process. See Question 13	Step One: Complete Petition for Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) and File Filing a TRO is an ex parte proceeding. This means only one party is filing the petition. Thus, the respondent does not need notice of the filing of the TRO petition. Once complete, take the TRO to the courthouse to file. Bring identification, as it is required to file the petition. After you give the petition to the clerk, you will be asked to wait while the clerk finds a judicial officer to review the petition/make a decision. The judge or circuit court commissioner will review the TRO petition. That person may ask you questions. However, you might not see the person at all. The court will grant/deny the TRO. If the judge or circuit court commissioner does not meet with you, the court will have the clerk return the signed or denied TRO to you. If the TRO is granted, the clerk must provide the sheriff with a copy of the TRO and injunction for service. The sheriff shall assist the petitioner with the service. §§813.115, 813.12(6)(a), 813.122(9)(a), 813.123(8)(a), 813.125(5g). If the TRO is denied, and the petitioner requested an injunction hearing on the TRO petition, the petitioner must provide the respondent with notice of the injunction hearing. This means there is no TRO prior to the hearing. The TRO process is complete when the petitioner does the following: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Complete the petition. 2. File the petition with the court. 3. Wait while the court reviews the petition and grants or denies; if granted, court sets a date/time for the injunction hearing. 4. Make sure the respondent has notice of the injunction hearing if a hearing date is scheduled. 		Step Two: Attend Injunction Hearing The injunction hearing must happen within 14 days of issuance of the TRO unless there is a one-time 14-day extension. If the extension is granted, be sure that proof of service has been provided to the court prior to the new date of the injunction hearing. There is no injunction hearing unless the petitioner provides notice of the hearing to the respondent. If the respondent cannot be located, the petitioner can attend the injunction hearing to ask for an extension of the TRO to allow service by publication for either a domestic abuse or harassment restraining order. Service by publication is not possible for individuals at risk or child abuse restraining orders. Injunction hearings vary. Basic process: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Court asks who is present. 2. Petitioner testifies. 3. Respondent can conduct cross-examination of the petitioner (ask questions of the petitioner). 4. Witnesses for petitioner testify; respondent can cross-examine. 5. Petitioner can cross-examine respondent. 6. Witnesses for respondent testify; petitioner can cross-examine. 7. Testimony is sometimes limited to only what was stated in the petition. 8. Cross examination is to be limited to ONLY what was said by the party. 9. Common objections to questions on cross examination are “not relevant” or “hearsay.” Allow the court to rule on an objection prior to testifying. The Injunction hearing is completed when: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Hearing is scheduled and service occurred. 2. The court conducts a hearing by asking questions or has parties/witnesses testify. 3. Parties bring/give “proof” about incidents. Parties may need to know how to present evidence. 4. If a GAL has been appointed, court hears GAL recommendation. 5. Court makes a decision to deny or grant order. See §813.12, §813.122, §813.123, or §813.125.

10. Are there other jurisdiction issues a court must consider beyond venue? This information is the same for all types of restraining orders	Yes. A court must have jurisdiction in order to hear a case. Venue is one part of jurisdiction. In addition to venue, a court must also have subject matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction before it can hear a case. Subject Matter Jurisdiction (SMJ) is the authority of the court to hear particular cases, claims, or controversies, depending upon their “subject matter,” or the type of lawsuit that is being filed. If a court lacks SMJ, any judgment by the court is void and nullified. Restraining orders are found in sections §§813.12, 813.122, 813.123 and 813.125 of the WI Statutes. Thus, because they are found in state law, Wisconsin courts have authority to hear restraining order cases. Unlike personal jurisdiction, the respondent cannot waive SMJ; the court must have SMJ regardless of respondent’s willingness for the court to hear the case without it. Subject matter jurisdiction law is found in §801.04(1). Personal Jurisdiction (PJ) is the authority to require a respondent to come into the state (WI) to defend against a lawsuit. When a case is brought, the court assumes PJ exists - it is the respondent’s duty to challenge PJ. Determining if the court has PJ depends on the defendant’s [respondent’s]: domicile; consent; physical presence; and minimum contacts with Wisconsin. Domicile: Wisconsin has PJ over all Wisconsin residents. Consent: A court may decide a case when it does not have PJ if the respondent has waived PJ. Physical Presence: If the respondent is present in the state at the time the summons and complaints are served on them, then Wisconsin has PJ over the respondent. Minimum Contacts: Wisconsin does have authority over a respondent from another state if the respondent has sufficient or minimum contacts with Wisconsin. When the respondent only has contact with Wisconsin in a single act, the state has PJ over respondent only as related to that single act or contact, but no PJ over unrelated claims. Abuse Across State Lines: Wisconsin provides three ways to allow a court to exercise PJ over a respondent in a civil restraining order case involving interstate abuse. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. An act or threat outside the state has an adverse effect on petitioner or member of petitioner’s family or household. The adverse effect must be: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> a. part of an ongoing harassment pattern b. the petitioner must currently reside in Wisconsin, and c. respondent has had direct or indirect communication with the petitioner or a member of the petitioner’s family or household or d. the respondent has indicated a threat to the physical health or safety of the petitioner or of a member of the petitioner’s family or household. e. Note: (c) must occur while the petitioner or a member of petitioner’s family or household resides or is temporarily living in Wisconsin. 2. The petitioner or member of petitioner’s family or household has sought safety or protection in Wisconsin as a result of an act or threat of respondent giving rise to petition. Can be found if respondent has had direct or indirect communication with the petitioner/member of petitioner’s family or household or respondent has indicated a threat to physical health or safety of petitioner or member of petitioner’s family or household. These must occur while petitioner or member of petitioner’s family or household resides or temporarily living in Wisconsin. 3. PJ permissible under United States Constitution or Wisconsin Constitution. Court can exercise PJ within constitutional limit even if a specific statute does not cover the situation. See §801.05(11m) Personal jurisdiction law is found in §801.05. Once the petitioner has chosen the proper court system (via SMJ) in the proper state (via PJ), venue directs the petitioner as to where petitioner may bring suit within the state. 34. Is law enforcement in another county/state mandated to provide service? This information is the same for all types of restraining orders.	While other counties/states are not mandated to provide service, if one WI county receives a restraining order from another WI county which needs to be served, they generally will and do assist each other. All states which receive VAWA funds are subject to a provision which states that law enforcement agencies are to serve protection orders on respondents without payment of filing or service fees by the victim. See 42 USC 3796gg-5, 42 USC 3796hh. This provision specifically applies to WI since WI gets VAWA funds. This provision is in compliance with the STOP grants and CDS (formerly Grants to Encourage Arrest) grants, both which WI receives. Federal law says victims are not to bear any costs associated with the filing, issuance, registration, modification, enforcement, dismissal, withdrawal or service of a protection order for any victim of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault or stalking whether issued inside or outside the State, tribe or local jurisdiction. Thus, since WI counties are subject to this law, they will usually provide service for an order from another county as a professional courtesy and not charge the other county or county law enforcement agency for this service. State law also states counties cannot charge the victim for service fees. §813.12(6), §813.122(9), §813.123(8), §813.125(5g). Whether another state will provide service depends on that state's laws regarding service of out of state restraining orders. It may also depend on the policies and procedures of a particular county in that state. Again, federal legislation states that victims are not to be charged for the service of protection orders. As a result, most states will assist another state in service of the restraining order without any cost to that law enforcement agency to comply with the spirit of the federal legislation. Law enforcement agencies may wish to have a Memo of Understanding (MOU) between themselves and any other agency with whom they regularly do business to clarify this issue. An advocate may wish to contact the sheriff in the other county or the person who provides service in the other state to ask about the policy and procedures and to ask that law enforcement agency to assist with service of the restraining order in keeping with federal law.

As a professional courtesy, counties and states usually provide service of restraining orders for another county or state because of the federal legislation noted in Question 34 above. Encourage the agencies within the state or county who are not providing this service to develop a Memo of Understanding (MOU) to be certain service does occur without causing hardship to the petitioner which is in violation of the spirit of federal law. 3. Contact the point person in the state in which the law enforcement agency is not providing service or wishes to charge for service to ask them to speak to the law enforcement agency about the federal law, its intent and its spirit. The point person for distribution of VAWA funds can be obtained through the National Center on Protection Orders and Full Faith & Credit. 4. While a petitioner may hire a private process server to serve the defendant at the petitioner's own expense, this WI provision [See §813.12(6)(a), §813.125(5g)(c)] is designed for situations in which the petitioner chooses a private process server for reasons known only to the petitioner. It is a violation of the federal law to force a petitioner to use and pay for a private process server because federal law says victims are not to bear any costs associated with the filing, issuance, registration, modification, enforcement, dismissal, withdrawal or service of a protection order for any victim of domestic violence, dating violence, sexual assault or stalking whether issued inside or outside the State, tribe or local jurisdiction. The choice of notification by telephone and/or email is determined by the petitioner upon registration. If petitioner decides to use telephone notification, petitioner will receive a 4-digit PIN number upon registration. VPO's notification system will alert petitioner of service of the TRO, the injunction, and when the respondent surrenders any firearms to local law enforcement, if firearms surrender is applicable. Petitioner registers for these services only one time in order to receive service notification of the TRO, injunction, and firearm restrictions. b. 51. Does the law allow a service representative to be present at an injunction hearing?	Yes. An adult petitioner has the right to select a service representative. The service representative has the right to attend, with the complainant, hearings, depositions and court proceedings, whether criminal or civil, and all interviews and meetings related to those hearings, depositions and court proceedings. See §895.45(2) .	No. The service representative law applies only to adult abusive complainants. See §895.45(2) .	Yes. A petitioner has the right to select a service representative to attend the hearing if the crime alleged in the petition meets the requirements of the statute. See §813.123(3)(c)1 .	Yes. A petitioner who is an adult abusive complainant has the right to select a service representative to attend the hearing if the crime alleged in the petition meets the requirements of the statute. See §895.45(2) .
52. Can anyone be excluded from an injunction hearing?	No. A victim has the right to select a service representative to accompany him/her, sit adjacent, and confer orally and in writing. See §895.45(2) . See Question 51 .	Yes. All persons, other than the parties, their attorneys, witnesses, child victim advocates, a victim service representative under §895.45 , court personnel and any guardian ad litem, shall be excluded from any hearing. §813.122(3)(bp) . Thus, advocates may be excluded from a child abuse injunction hearing unless a court determines they are present as a child victim advocate . A victim service representative under §895.45 only applies to adult abusive complainants; thus, it does not apply to a child abuse injunction hearing. In Juvenile Court, §48.299 states that the court has the right to keep the public out of all hearings. Thus, when a case is filed in juvenile court (See Question 2), a court may or may not allow an advocate to be present. See Question 51 .	Yes. The court or circuit court commissioner may order that all persons, other than the individual at risk, the parties, their attorneys, a representative of the adult-at-risk agency or elder-adult-at-risk agency, witnesses, court personnel, and any guardian or any guardian ad litem, be excluded from any hearing. §813.123(3)(c)1 . See Question 51 .	Yes and No. Yes for minor victims: There is nothing in §813.125 that addresses whether a child advocate can or cannot be present in civil court. A victim service representative under §895.45 only applies to adult abusive complainants; thus, it does not apply to a harassment injunction hearing involving a minor victim. In Juvenile Court, §48.299 states that the court has the right to keep the public out of all hearings. Thus, when a case is filed in juvenile court (See Question 2), a court may or may not allow an advocate to be present. No for adult victims: A victim who is an adult has the right to select a victim service representative to accompany him/her, sit adjacent, and confer orally and in writing. See §895.45(2) . A victim service representative under §895.45 only applies to adult abusive complainants. See Question 51 .

61. What is issue preclusion (collateral estoppel) and what is claim preclusion (res judicata)? This information is the same for all types of restraining orders.	Issue preclusion and claim preclusion are separate doctrines. Although some states view issue preclusion and claim preclusion as interchangeable, Wisconsin views the two concepts as separate doctrines. Kruckenberg v. Harvey, 2005 WI 43, 279 Wis. 2d 520, 694 N.W.2d 879. Issue preclusion deals with whether you can re-litigate an issue litigated in an earlier case. Claim preclusion deals with whether you can file a second suit based on the same claim filed in an earlier lawsuit. Issue Preclusion, also known as collateral estoppel, is a doctrine designed to limit the relitigation of issues contested in a previous action between the same or different parties. Michelle T. v. Crozier, 173 Wis. 2d 681 (1993). If the court decides that the issue is precluded because it has already been decided, the court may require new information or a new incident of abuse/harassment before a new injunction is granted. Issue preclusion did not apply in a domestic abuse injunction case where a petitioner received an injunction, vacated it, and applied for a new injunction based on the same facts. Estate of Rille v. Physicians Ins. Co., 2007 WI 36. Issue preclusion can only be applied if the matter has been "actually litigated" (and conclusively decided) in a prior court proceeding. A circuit court then has discretion to decide whether applying issue preclusion would rationally conform to principles of fundamental fairness, considering five specific factors enunciated in Michelle T. v. Crozier, 173 Wis. 2d 681 (1993). A party can file a motion for reconsideration to request the circuit court to amend its findings/conclusions or make additional findings/conclusions and change the judgment accordingly. §805.17(3). A motion for reconsideration must either provide newly discovered evidence or establish an error of law or fact; an error is demonstrated by the circuit court's misapplication of or failure to recognize existing law. Therefore, a motion for reconsideration cannot be used to introduce evidence that could have been presented at the initial hearing/trial. Koepsell's Olde Popcorn Wagons v. Koepsell's Festival Popcorn Wagons, 2004 WI App 129. 2. A party can file a motion for relief to request the trial court to reopen a decision based on certain circumstances. Some circumstances include mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, newly discovered evidence which entitles a party to a new trial, fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party. The motion for relief must be made within one year after the judgment was entered or the order or stipulation was made. See § 806.07. 3. Any party can file for an appeal by right requesting the court of appeals to review a final decision issued by a judge; a final decision is one which resolves all the issues in the dispute. An appeal is more likely to be successful if the record has been preserved, which requires a party to raise any objections to potential legal errors during the circuit court trial/hearing. Failure to make an objection typically results in that issue being waived on appeal. If an objection is not made during the trial/hearing, the losing party could ask the judge at the time of the decision to explain the legal basis for the decision, which also serves to preserve the objection. On appeal, legal questions will be decided independently, meaning that an appellate court will not defer to the trial court on questions of law. §808.03(1). Note: an appeal that questions whether the evidence presented was sufficient to support the circuit court's findings may be raised regardless of whether the respondent objected in the trial court to such findings. §805.17(4). Because the statutes make these injunctions permissive ("the judge may grant...") rather than mandatory, an appellate court will only overturn the judge's discretionary decision on a sufficiency appeal if the evidence was clearly insufficient to support the injunction. In Re Lubinski, 2008 WI App 151; Welytok v. Ziolkowski, 2008 WI App 67. 4. An appeal by permission can be used to appeal to the court of appeals any non-final order that is in writing and on file with the clerk of courts. Such appeals are meant to protect the petitioner from substantial or irreparable injury or to clarify an issue of general importance in the administration of justice. §808.03(2). Note: An appeal is complicated, time-consuming, and difficult. The assistance of an attorney is recommended if possible. Parties who appear pro se are expected to know and follow all appellate rules, found in Chapter 809 of the Wisconsin Statutes. A party can file a motion for relief to request the trial court to reopen a decision based on certain circumstances. Some circumstances include mistake, inadvertence, surprise, excusable neglect, newly discovered evidence which entitles a party to a new trial, fraud, misrepresentation, or other misconduct of an adverse party. A Notice of Appeal for an appeal by right must be filed with the court of appeals within 45 days of the judgment if the party received written notice of the judgment; if no written notice was received, a party has 90 days to file. If the party first filed a motion for reconsideration (see answer #1), the time for initiating an appeal commences when the court denies the motion on the record or when an order denying the motion is entered, whichever occurs first. If the court failed to decide a motion within 90 days of the original judgment and the motion is thus "denied," the 90-day appeal timeframe begins after the original 90 days (following the circuit court judgment) have passed. A fee must be included with the original Notice of Appeal. Within 14 days of this initial filing, a party must file a Statement on Transcript (note: a transcript is needed if the appeal refers to any statements made in court, and a request for the transcript should be filed with the circuit court before this Statement on Transcript is filed with the appellate court). §§805.17, 808.04(1). 4.
