The Chippewa River State Trail borders the north and west boundaries of the recreation area. Now abandoned, the Chicago, Milwaukee, St Paul and Pacific railroad corridor is along the southern border of the property.

Railroad Monument
Old pilings from a previous railroad are still visible in the water below.

Over 130 years ago, this area of land contained housing and was highly productive farmland that raised crops and food for the nearby lumbering community. Porter's Mill was a sawmill located west of the property. The census in 1890 indicated 1,194 people living in this community.

The Red Flint Recreation Area provides diverse vegetation and scenic views.

You can find many native trees such as Red and Sugar Maple, Hackberry, River Birch, White Pine and Oak, as well as Spruce and Juniper. The property is also noted to have a small prairie habitat with sandy soil, prairie grasses, and Red Cedar. A peninsula filled with Pine juts out from the south shoreline of the lake.
