Things to Consider When Choosing an Agency to Provide Care for You or a Loved One

Agency:

- Is the agency insured? (All agencies on this list are insured)
- Do they have a good reputation in the community?
- What is their staff turnover rate?

Staff:

- Are care providers background checked? How extensive is that check?
- What sort of training is required for care providers?
- Will I be able to keep the same caregiver?
- Am I able to request a specific gendered care provider for personal care tasks?

Cost:

- What is the cost of their services?
- Do they have a required minimum number of service hours?
- How can these services be paid for?

Scheduling:

- Do you have specific hours of service or is staff also available overnight, on weekends or on holidays?
- How much advance notice is required for scheduling care?
- What is the availability of their staff?
- How often can they provide services?

Hiring an outside agency isn't the right solution for everyone who finds themselves in need of home care. Some other options to consider are:

- Paying a friend, family member, or other private party to provide the care that you need. (we suggest doing a background check and having a caregiver agreement on file if you select this option)
- Consult with your friend group, family, faith community or other social network to share their experiences with services, solutions, agencies, and providers in the area.
- Think about taking something else off your plate to free up time, energy, or funds to get the care that you need.

The ADRC provides counseling about options available to meet long-term care needs as well as factors to consider in making long-term care decisions. If you're interested in meeting with an Options Counselor to discuss your situation in more detail, please don't hesitate to reach out to us!
